BIO

Lucke Campbell, pronounced Lucke is a true servant leader. In her profession, she is the Director of Security and Situation Awareness Specialist with Allied Universal. These positions allow her to oversee and equip a team of security professionals with awareness and capabilities to understand and deal with the dynamics of random and potentially threatening events. She is also an entrepreneur and host of The Lucke Project a Conservative podcast aimed toward helping people become free thinkers.

In the community, Lucke serves as the State Director for the BLEXIT Texas Chapter. BLEXIT is a 501(C)3 organization that seeks to change the narrative that surrounds America's minority communities - with a particular focus on African-Americans. Two of the ways BLEXIT does this is by advocating for School Choice and alternative educational opportunities for America's low-income and minority children and developing history programs that will inspire minority children to succeed and lead productive and responsible lives.

Being a mother of three and having taught K-12 for five years, has fueled Lucke's passion for children and their personal development. She understands the innocence of our children is at stake with the current push for the implementation of curriculums that challenge the parent's ability to choose what is best for their children.

Currently, Ms. Campbell is enrolled in the Jack Welch Management Institute where she is working toward her MBA degree with a concentration in Operations Management.
